"I feel it is important for the patient to understand the high tech engineering process involved in the manufacturing of iBraces. The built in memory of the wires is continuously moving the teeth with light biological forces.."

Years in practice: 13
Staff members: 12
Active patients: 300 Adults = 35% downtown / 75% mall

How long have you been using iBraces?

I first heard about iBraces a couple of years ago. I was certified along with 3 of my staff members in Feb 2006. I have been using Ormco seventh generation lingual brackets since 1998 which made the transition easier.

What types of your patients choose iBraces?

iBraces are the number one treatment choice for most of my clients no matter if they are adolescents, young mothers or working men and women at any stage of life...like competing for career jobs or in the dating scene.

How did your staff react when you told them that you wanted to use iBraces in the practice?

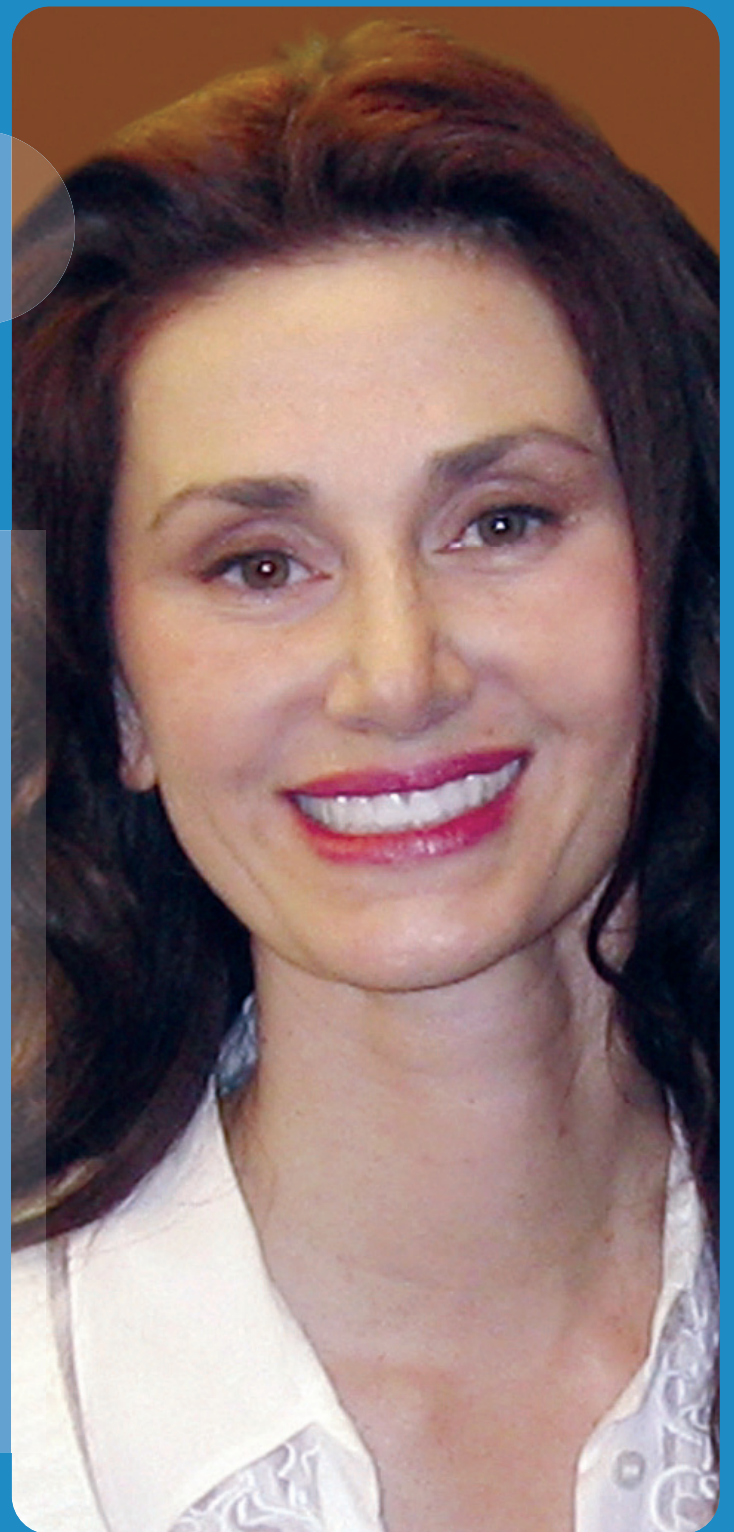

The staff was very nervous about their ability to learn the new system. Four of my staff members came with me to the First Annual Users Meeting in Santa Fe in Sept 2006. They were truly inspired by the program and excited about trying out the techniques that they learned on our own patients.

How do your patients like iBraces?

All of my iBraces patients love the fact that no one can tell they are wearing braces to straighten their teeth. They would not have considered braces if it meant wearing them on the outside of their teeth even though many had considered braces for the past 10 to 20 years.

Would you recommend iBraces to other orthodontists?

Yes, I would highly recommend iBraces however, I would advise them to have an onsite training and choose a simple non-extraction case for there first bonding. iBraces is superior to any current bracket-wire system and the design allows for maximum patient comfort.
